Campaign Aspires to Embrace U.S. Troops in an Uplifting Way

Tshirtalerts launches a new campaign to provide encouragement and comfort for our military.

Addison, IL, February 19, 2007 --(PR.COM)-- The Web site tshirtalerts.com is inviting Americans worldwide to participate in what it hopes will become one of the largest showings of support ever for U.S. troops defending freedom in Iraq and around the world.

"Operation America Reaches Out" is an online campaign created to provide encouragement and comfort for our military forces still away from their loved ones and absent from their cherished homes.

The campaign highlights the site anysoldier.com in an effort to provide the public and online community with a way to contact U.S. military troops abroad. The site enables soldiers who don't always receive mail with an opportunity to get greetings, packages and letters from members of the public.

Visitors to tshirtalerts.com can also help bolster the temperament of troops by posting an uplifting message on its site's message board.

With a divided Congress contemplating whether it should endorse President Bush's plan to send additional troops to Iraq, our armed forces truly need our support now more than ever.

Whether or not you agree with the president's policy, there is one notion only a unified America can admirably agree upon -- sending our prayers and devotion to U.S. troops is never an ill-conceived idea.
